

Spring Cheese Board

My family loves cheese... The softer the better. I am a goat cheese person, the boys love Port Salut and Brie... but really I think we would eat any cheese put in front of us. Trader Joes always has a great selection of cheeses and meats, so a board is easy to put together and you can garnish it with just about anything. All I had today in the fridge was raspberries and some raw cashews, so that is what I added, but you can slice strawberries, cucumbers and add any kind of nut you like to the mix. Since its spring and Easter I added some Lori Stern pressed edible flowers for some spring cheer and then some William Sonoma chocolate covered almonds and of course a few of my favorite cookies by the Cookie Monger. But there aren't any rules so you add whatever you like to your cheese board, the more the better. This fun board was given to me as a gift by a friend she always finds the most unique stuff... She got it from a company called uncommon goods, I think I need to check them out. Just have fun laying out your board with your favorite cheese and crackers and make it a piece of art... Have fun with it and I promise your family and guests will eat it all up! Happy Spring!
